Phil Anderson is a political insider from the epicentre of the EU referendum earthquake. In 2011, the borough of Thurrock in Essex stepped into the national spotlight when it came bottom of the national league table for life satisfaction. By 2016 that disaffection and anger had boiled over into political insurrection, and Thurrock led Britain out of the door of the EU with one of the highest 'leave' votes in the country.

Starting from the underlying causes of the mass dis-satisfaction that brought us to here, this book offers a clear vision for what a post-Brexit Britain should look like. From unemployment to immigration, council estates to the banking industry, and local communities to the global environment, it takes a long, hard look at what really creates the conditions for people and communities to flourish and why we're just not feeling it as a nation. The answers combine radical political ideas with grassroots Essex reality; because if the solutions don't work for White Van Man then they probably won't work at all.

Author

Phil Anderson was a leader of Thurrock Christian Fellowship and of the international 24-7 Prayer movement when he felt an unexpected call into the world of politics. Within a year of being elected in 2010 he found himself as local party leader in one of the toughest marginal constituencies in the UK.

Phil's experience proves that it is possible to reach the top levels of politics without having to hide your Christian faith. Along the way he has been co-ordinator of the National Prayer Breakfast, a Director of the Thames Gateway Development Corporation and the Thurrock Racial Unity Support Taskgroup, and a regular media contributor in print, radio, internet, and occasional TV.

He is married to Lisa and has two teenage daughters.
